publishes the following particulars, suppress ing names and location:

A wealthy resident in the vicinity lost a lovely and only daughter last week under peculiar ortermstances. She was a young lady about sixteen years of age, and had always presented the very picture of robust health. One day she returned home from school, and, after chatting pleasantly about the house for a few moments, suddenly complained of dizziness and languor; in an instant later sinking down upon the sofa and expiring. Shortly after the young lady had been interred, wager rumors reached the father's ears that some medical students, whose curiosity had been greatly excited by the circumstances attending her death, and who were anxious to learn, through a post mortem examination, the cause thereof, were intending to resurrect the body on a certain night. night.

Both horrified and enraged at the barrier bearing the truth night.

Both horrified and enraged at the bare idea—although scarcely crediting the truth of the report—the father armed himself with a double-barreled fowing piece, and stationed himself near his daughter's grave, on the night in question, to guard it against the threatened violation. A monument, over which drooped a weeping-willow, hid him from view, while, from his place of concealment, he could see any object that might approach the grave, owing to the bright moon that sailed overhead. Nine, ten, eleven o'clock came, and no resurrectionists. He began to think that his credulity had got the better of him, and that, after all, his daughter would be allowed to rest in her grave, when footsteps were suddenly heard approaching. Crouching down closely beside the monument, and peering cautiously out, he was horriped at seeing three men approach, and halt by the grave of his loved one. They were provided with picks, shovels, a rope, and a large oil-cloth sack. Their horrid object could not be mistaken when two of them commenced to dig into the grave.

The father's blood almost froze in his veins at the sight, but he was firm in his determination to wreak vengeance on the used.

"About nine o'clock last night a common market cart, drawn by an old horse, emerged from the hospital gates. The end of a deal coffin hung over the tail-board, and the name 'Williams,' written on it with a piece of chalk, showed that it contained the body of the suicide. In the course of an hour the cart, with its burden, was drawn up on the highway alongside a hedge at Norwood. The night watchman at the cemetery was called, and informed of the business on hand. The functionaries at the cemetery were just going night watchman at the cemetery was called, and informed of the business on hand. The functionaries at the cemetery were just going to bed, and were completely taken by surprise by the production of the warrant for an immediate burial so late at night, for a case of the kind had not occurred there for twenty-six years.

"Mr. Gardiner, the superintendent, sent messengers to the neighboring public house, and was fortunate enough to find two grave-diggers there. These men were promptly set to work to dig a grave at the southwest corner of the cemetery, beneath some lime trees. When the grave was deep enough the cart, which had been left out on the high road, was driven into the grounds. The men unceremoniously lifted the coffin from the cart, and guided by the flickering light of the lanterns, carried it to the roughly-made grave. The excavation was longer than the coffin, and at either end near the bottom a candle was stuck into the earth, where, screened from the wind, which blew strongly and whistled through the trees, they cast a sickly light upon the yellow clay. The coffin was lowered into its place by means of ropes, the earth was instantly shovelled in and stamped down, the lights were put out, and all was over." The father's blood almost froze in his voins at the sight, but he was firm in his determination to wreak vengeance on the would-be body-snatchers. Cocking both barrels of his gun, and taking deliberate sim, he discharged both of them at the men who were digging, at the instant their bodies were closely together. One of the men fell to the ground, but was quickly raised up by the others, who hurried with him from the cemetery as quickly as they could, one of them hopping as though badly hart. The three then rode away in a wagon. The father did not give chase, thinking that he had punished them enough for their conduct.

The affair has caused great excitement in the vicinity. It is not known who the would-be resurrectionists were, the utmost mystery enveloping them. Public sympathy entirely sides with the father. The Peasant-Nobleman of Russia Concerning the Russian peasant who saved the life of the Czar a Moscow letter

Concerning the Russian peasant who saved the life of the Czar a Moscow letter-writer says:

"But amongst that crowd of unknown celebrities there was one pointed out to me of whom most of the world has heard. That small, timid-looking lad, who is standing in a corner, is the famous Komissaroff—the man who saved the life of the Uzar. A few months ago he was a mere peasant. Now he is a nobleman, and wears a brilliant uniform, and has lots of orders on his breast.

Last season he was the hero of the day. He was embraced in public by any number of grand dukes and duchesses. His portraits were in every shop window. His brother nobles were about to buy him a palace by private subscription. A deputation sent from the great trans-Atlantic Republic, on purpose to congratulate the Czar, insisted on being presented to the saviour of a Life so dear to America and all the Russians. But now his lion head—if I may coin the word—is lost. The subscription has never come to anything; the felicitations of the American delegates, however gratifying, did not take a substantial form; and I am told that on his last public appearance, when he stood in a tent on the Newski, at the occasion of the Czarevitch's marriage, he, in stage parlance, had ceased to draw. Already candid friends are beginning to declare that he only shoved the assassin's arm by mistake, and that he ran away the very moment he heard the pistol go off; but I distrust these stories, as human nature all the world over delights in proving that a dead lion never deserved to wear the lion's skin at all. Anyhow, Komissaroff is 'played out.' I suppose I was nearly the only person in that crowded room who had any curiosity to look at him."

The Ordion of Fretton Matches.—In 1832 a man by the name of Phillips, in Oak-"We have remarked that the ladies wear in the streets the particular style of dress adopted by the women connected with the society of Nihilists. The toilet is characterized by round hats, hiding the hair, which is cut short; blue spectacles, and the absence of crinoline. Since the criminal attempt of the 15th of April the society which has produced a regicide is abhorred by all right-thinking people. The contume adopted by it ought therefore to be considered by those whose duty it is to preserve public order as a provocation deserving blame and punishment. We therefore request the authorities to specially watch the persons alluded to, and to order the police of the city and districts to send them to the bureaus, where they should undertake in writing to change their style of dress. In case of their refusal, they should undertake in writing to change their style of dress. In case of their refusal, they should be warned that they will incur the penalty of exile, in conformity with existing laws. The police ought, moreover, to exercise a vigorous surveillance on the habits and procedures of these persons. "We have remarked that the ladies wear

The first matches were made and dipped singly by hand; afterwards Phillips invented the card matches. Such, in brief, is the early history of this little article that is now considered an indispensable necessity. There must be many persons now living in Hartford who will recollect the red wagon, painted in large letters upon the side, a Variety of the term of the side, and the side of the sid painted in large letters upon the side "Friction Matches," as it passed through the streets, drawn by one horse.

THE STEAMER RESACA.—Some time ago we announced that the United States steamer Resaca, which sailed from Portsmouth, N. H., nearly three months since, for San Francisco, had not been heard from, and that fears had been entertained for her safety. This announcement has brought to light several letters from persons on board the steamer, which show that she is perfectly safe, and has been snoken and seen at various noints on the

The London Morning Star has the following:

"For the first time within a quarter of a century Norwood Cemetery was last midnight the scene of the burial of the corpse of a file deae without Christian rites. The coroner's jury, which last avening, at six o'clock, found that the commercial clerk William George Williams had committed the crime of self-murder, imposed upon Mr. Bergeant Paine the necessity of issuing his warrant for the burial of the body by torchlight between that time and midnight. The last vardict'of fold de se returned at Guy's Hospital was in the case of a person that died there twenty years ago, and on that occasion the horrible form of driving a stake into the body was gone through. The ghastly coremony was performed in the burial-ground adjacent to the hospital, and is said to have been almost the last instance in which that obsolete barbarism was exercised in Lagdon. Lest the tradition should be, by any misconception, carried out in the present case, the coroner expressly ordered that no stake should be used.

AN .- The Detroit Post says: "On December 15, General Morrow, collector of customs, caused the seizure of two celebrated race horses, Dan Rice and Lamplighter. Alamson C. Sheley, of Windsor, a Jockey, owned the horses, and frequently came to this side, ostensibly for the purpose of taking pleasure drives. This was carried on to a great extent, the well-known animals being seen in Detroit daily. It soon was ascertained that the horses were the property of a Canadian, and was kept and fed on British soil. We gladly print the following note, which comes to us from an authentic source in Baltimore. It shows that the United States officers are vigilant, and do their duty. The facts it relates were not known here when we wrote upon the subject of alavery in Maryland, a few days ago. They are of great interest: terest:

"To the Editors of the Evening Pest:

"From an article published in your paper a few days ago, headed Slavery in Maryland, with reference to the enforcement of the Civil Hights bill in Maryland, I see that you refact upon the United States officers whose duly it is to carry out the provisions of said bill. You say: Let it (Congress) in quire what the District Attorney, the Marshal and the Commissioners are doing, or why they do not do their duty. In reply, I would state that three warrants have issued (since the Civil Rights bill was a law)—two against justices of the peace, and one against Judge Magruder, for redusing to admit negro testimony. The United States grand jury have found two indictments, and have dismissed one case for want of evidence.

"Judge Magruder has already been arrested and indicted for refusing to receive negro testimony; he has pleaded guilty before the District Court, and his case has been sent to the Circuit Court for this district. After this indictment had been found, Judge Magruder has alcond warrant has seen is sued for his arrest, and his case will been issued for his arrest, and his case will gruder returned home and ordered the sale of the negroes convicted of lareeny referred to in your article, and a second warrant has been issued for his arrest, and his case will probably be heard this week.

"The Commissioner has given notice that he will continue arresting on every new violation of the act, and that he will do all his power to prevent a repetition of the offence. I would also state that in every single case that has been brought to the knowledge of the United States Commissioner a warrant has been issued, the party arrested, and the case sent to the United States grand jury for their action. We are as anxious to enforce this action in this State as you are that it shall be enforced, and your charges against the Commissioners that they are lax in the performance of their duties, are both unjust and incorrect, and we think it is therefore due to them that you make the proper correction in your next issue.

Among the London Times advertisements the following recently appeared: "Archbishop Manning acknowledges, with his thanks, the letter and enclosure of N. I. L., received safely on November 5th." The transaction to which the announcement dimly refers is extraordinary. On the day on which the Gunpowder Plot is called to mind by grotesque exhibitions in the public streets, Archbishop Manning received the letter alluded to, the enclosure being acheck on a leading bank for the sum of £500. The sender gave no name, but signed himself "Guy Faux, a Frotestant," and marked his donation, "for the use of Pope Pius IX." Archbishop Manning looked upon the letter in the light of a jest, and was about throwing letter and check on the fire, when his secretary suggested that they might be able to trace the author of the supposed hoax, inasmuch as the check was numbered and lettered by the bankers. Archbishop Manning agreed to this, and on the check being presented at the bank, the manager said he had instructions to pay the amount, and that the gift was that of a Protestant gentleman, who was anxious that his name should not be made known. The Archbishop transmitted the money in due time to Rome, and thanked the donor by public advertisement.

Great Snowderft on the Lake Shore

GREAT SNOWDRIFT ON THE LAKE SHORE RATLROAD—A very heavy gale has been blowing between Punkirk and Erie, N. Y., since early last evening. It has drifted the snow for great lengths in places along the line of the Lake Shore railroads, the drifts averaging from six to ten feet in depth. The night express train, which left Erie at 1.25 this morning with two powerful engines, and which was due here at 4.50 a. m., was caught in one of the deepest of these drifts, at Ripley Crossing, all efforts to extricate it proving unavailing, and at half past 11 this morning it was still stuck fast.—Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, Saturday.
